

After more than half a century shaping the minds and spirits of young Southern California children, now is the ideal time for First Presbyterian to pay homage to our roots, celebrate who we are and prepare for who we will become over the next 50 years.

To that end, we have updated our image. On the inside - where things matter most like our teachers, quality of education, focus on faith and strong sense of community – nothing has changed. Now, however, the name of our school, the look of our logo, the colors of our uniforms will all work together to proudly herald our school's excellence while honoring its robust past.

We are now...

First Presbyterian Preparatory School

By changing a single word in our name, we effectively highlight how First Pres prepares our kids for future greatness while staying true to who we've always been. At the same time, our new logo pays tribute to what's come before by maintaining the tree symbol rooted so strongly in our faith, while the added shield creates a legitimate academic crest, reinforcing our dedication to excellence and achievement.

As we look back upon our rich history, we feel renewed gratitude to the past and present teachers, former students and parents who helped shape our school into one of the finest educational institutions in Southern California. Simultaneously, we eagerly look forward to the future as we strive to reach new heights in the years and decades to come.
